S. V. T. COMPANY TO FILL-IN RAILS

TRACTION TO PAY FOR WORK THROUGH CITY

Litigation Comes to End When Cryder Makes Offer Here Wednesday

WILL COST $1,027.50

The Scioto Valley Traction Co.'s unused rails through this city will be repaired by filling in tar and chipped stone at the expense of the traction company it was agreed Wednesday evening at city council meeting. H. A. Cryder, of the Scioto Valley, met with council and placed the company's offer before councilmen.

He said it had been agreed between officials of the company to offer the city cash in the amount of $1,027.50 to repair the rails itself, or that the traction company would employ a contractor to do the work at its expense. After considerable discussion, before the regular meeting of council, city solons decided that the work could not be done for that amount.

An effort was made by councilmen to have the contractor who obtains the work use local labor but Mr. Cryder said that it will be up to the contractor to get what he wants to work for him, that the traction company cannot designate where the labor will be obtained.

The company officials arrived at the valuation of the work at $1,027.50 by figuring 12 cents per lineal foot for repair of 8,565 feet of track through the city which have to be repaired. The same basis was used in Chillicothe where the council voted that the traction company could proceed with the work.

The appearance of Mr. Cryder followed a meeting in Columbus recently, when councilmen, members of the service committee, met with traction officials in an effort to have the work done. It was promised then that an official would present a proposition at the next meeting of council.

The agreement between the city and traction company was reached after the city has gone to court in an effort to have the rails removed from Court-st. R. T. Johnson, president of the company flatly refused to remove the rails because of the great expense necessary. Mr. Cryder said Wednesday that the traction company believes the repair of the rails is merely a gift and not required by law. He said the repairs will be guaranteed to be kept in usable condition for one year from the time of completion.

REMOVE STEEL

Mr. Cryder said that the Joseph Schoenthal Co., of Columbus, now has a contract with the traction company to remove all steel from the lines by May 14. This includes the rails on Clinton and Washington-sts in this city, he stated.

Work is expected to begin here as soon as it is completed in Chillicothe where a like contract has been entered into.

The city's suit in common pleas court will be withdrawn.

"BREACH OF PROMISE" SUIT IS TRIED IN COURT TONIGHT

Trial of Nellie Bly Against Joe Lynch, Sponsored By American Legion, To Be Staged at Memorial Hall Two Nights; Cast Is Good One.

A scandalous 'breach of promise' suit is to be tried at Memorial Hall here this evening beginning at 8:15 when the case of Nellie Bly against Joseph Lynch gets underway.

Some of the revelations of the century corresponding, we imagine, with the trial of Andrew H. Brown, incriminated, are bound to be expounded in this trial which promises to be full of action from start to finish.

The trial will be given two evenings, Thursday and Friday, under the auspices of Howard Hall post American Legion and staged by Interstate Productions, directed by Miss Frances Pettyjohn.

The principal character naturally is Nellie Bly, but the catch is we don't know who she is. Then comes the judge, portrayed by Hizzoner B. T. Hedges, mayor of all he surveys, within the incorporate limits of this fair city; the clerk of courts, Charles Gusman; the Drum, Vern Pontius, John Hulise, torney for the plaintiff, Miss Peterson.

PARIS AFFORDS SPANISH QUEEN LOUD GREETING

Several Hundred Spanish Aristocrats Bow Heads in Grief on Arrival

PLANS UNDECIDED

28 Rooms in Hotel at Disposal of Party

MARSEILLES, France, Apr. 16.—Alfonso XIII, who arrived here from Spain on a cruiser shortly after dawn, left by train for Paris at 12:30 p. m. to rejoin Queen Victoria and the children.

PARIS, Apr. 16.—Queen Victoria, accompanied by all her children with the exception of the Infante Don Juan; arrived in Paris at 9:20 a. m. today.

Forced to leave Spain 25 years to the day after she entered that country in triumph as Queen of Alfonso, she was greeted here by a fervent group of friends and royalist supporters.

HEADS ARE BARED

Three hundred Spanish aristocrats bared their heads as the queen descended from the train with her children. All the women awaiting her in the reception party were dressed in black.

With difficulty, apparently under great strain and striving to press back her tears, Queen Victoria passed between two lines of royalists. They seized her hands and kissed them.

A huge bunch of red roses was presented to her as she walked out of the station preceded by Chief of Police Chippie.

"Viva La Reina!" cried the children and the royalist who followed her.

A crowd of 500 men and women nearly mobbed the royal party as police details as it reached the street. The police cordon was rushed aside as hundreds pressed forward to kiss the hem of the queen's dress.

Finally, to rescue Victoria from the mob, one of her attendants was forced to "push" her into the waiting automobile.

CROWD IS MAMMOTH

The car was unable to make a get-away, however, as the surging hundreds blocked all progress. Police finally succeeded in clearing a passage. The royal party then proceeded to the Hotel Meurice, where the exiles received another ovation from a waiting crowd.

The queen's party consisted of 35 persons. Twenty eight rooms were placed at its disposal by the Hotel Meurice on the first floor.

Each room was abundantly supplied with bouquets of roses and violets.

An officer of the queen's party stated: "Her majesty's plans depend entirely on the king's orders, which have not as yet been received."

Work Depends on Appropriation Bill in Assembly Highwaymen Say

ACTION IS AWAITED

Spangler Wants Cash for Route 56, Report

Possibility that entrances to this city from the Lancaster-pk, from the Adelphi-pk and from the Washington C. H.-pk, contemplated by the state highway department for this summer, will not be paved this year, was expressed at city council meeting Wednesday evening by Frank Baker, chairman of the service committee.

Baker stated that during the visit of the committee to Columbus recently to confer with traction line officials, members of the state highway department stated that the work depends upon an appropriation bill pending in the legislature.

Highway office attaches are reported to have told the committee that Senator William L. Spangler of Tilton, Pickaway-co's representative to the state senate, desired that Pickaway-co's share of state highway work this year be done on state route 56, the Adelphi pike, which runs from this city to Laurelsville and through Hocking-co into Athens.

The work depends entirely upon the action of the state department. Several months ago the highway department asked city council for permission to pave these three entrances to the city. Council readily granted permission and was of the opinion that the work would be done in the early summer.

Now the council knows not what to look for in the way of improvement until action comes from Columbus.

WILL STUDY RATE FINDING

Council Names Committee To Work With Others on Phone Rate Fight.

A committee of three members of council, C. O. Leist, Frank Baker and Clark Will, were named by President of Council John C. Goeller Wednesday evening to meet with representatives of the farm bureau, the Chamber of Commerce and of the villages of Williamsport, Ashville and Laurelsville, in regard to the decision of the state utilities commission on the Citizens Telephone Co. rate case.

All the above named aided in the fight against the rate boost of the company four years ago and all have an equal voice in what shall be done about the new rate.

The utilities ruled a lower rate than is now being paid but did not go as low as the valuation of property for rate-making purposes warrants, according to officials here.

JACKSON IS HELD IN CHILlicothe

John Jackson, 39, colored, this city is being held by Chillicothe police for hearing before Mayor J. R. Gunning, on a charge of reckless driving, following an auto accident in Chillicothe Tuesday.

While the occupants were badly shaken up and bruised, none were seriously injured.

AIRPLANE PARTS FALL THRU ROOF

WASHINGTON, April 16.—It rained airplane parts upon the home of four negroes in the southeastern section. As the heavy pieces of a huge airplane crashed through the roof and on through the floors of the two story house to the ground, Harold Stewart and his family really believed the world had come to an end, or at least their stay here was ended.

But after the noise of crashing timber and bricks ended and the clouds of dust cleared, there was not a single casualty.

Paul Hogvard, pilot for the Keystone Aircraft Corp., Bristol, Pa., saved his life with a parachute, while the negroes owe their lives to the fact they were hungry and were in the kitchen when the machine fell apart above their house.

The kitchen was the only room in the house that was left intact.

CONSTABLE IS HELD IN JAIL

Nelson Stout Charged With Intoxication, Was To Be Fined Thursday At 3.

Nelson H. Stout, Circleville-twp constable, was to be sentenced Thursday afternoon, by Probate Judge E. A. Brown after he pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication. He was arrested Wednesday evening by Deputy Bryan Custer at the home of Andrew Stakely, Clinton-st.

Along with Stout was Ben Valentine, this city, who after pleading guilty to intoxication was fined $100 and costs and committed to the Columbus workhouse unless the fine and costs are paid.

Here's the story of the escapade as told by the sheriff's department: Mrs. Valentine knowing that her husband was not just where he should be and not doing what he should have been doing called the constable to investigate and to take Ben to his home. "Stouty" went to the Stakely home and found Ben but he remained too long. When Deputy Custer received the call he went to the Clinton-st. residence and took both men into custody.

He took Stout's badge which he was holding Thursday.

In explanation, it should be understood that it is our purpose to protect the rights of our rural customers and to eliminate the practice of business men and employees leaving their cars parked for long periods in the business district, making it necessary for patrons of our business houses to park their cars long distances from the business district.

We earnestly hope that your honorable body will give the above resolution your thoughtful consideration and pass the necessary legislation for the limited parking of automobiles in the business district.

Very truly yours,
The Circleville Chamber of Commerce,

COL. L. AYRES SEES GRADUAL RECOVERY FROM DEPRESSION

CLEVELAND, O.—Improvement in general business conditions, although only meager, was noted during all of the first quarter of 1931. Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Company, said today in his monthly business bulletin.

“Activity was greater, and industrial production was larger at the end of January than at the close of December,” Colonel Ayres said. “The advance continued during February and through March, and the improvement was sufficiently definite to be unmistakable even after due allowance had been made for normal seasonal increases.”

The significant fact about business conditions at the start of the second quarter, the economist stated, is that improvement, while real, has been only meager, and that symptoms of a vigorous upturn are lacking.

“The evidence that continues to accumulate indicates that the bottom of the depression has been reached,” the review noted. “But as yet there are no trustworthy signs to show how far ahead that bottom is likely to extend.”

“The three basic industries of iron and steel, building construction and automobile, all have shown increased production, but in each case the upturn has been slow and restricted. Movements of freight on the railroads are still at low depression levels,” he said.

Other business trends noted by Colonel Ayres were: security prices made good advances in the first two months of the year but dropped them in March, credit is more than ample in amount; many bargains probably are available in stocks and real estate but investors are afraid of them.

“Danger of a continuation of last year’s drought is rapidly fading, for there has been in recent weeks a considerable amount of rain and snow well distributed. Agriculture is getting away to a hopeful start, with reports of considerable reductions in the acreages planted in those crops that were produced in excessive amounts last year.”

ROADS FIGHT FOR TOURISTS

KENTON, O.—Residents of communities along two parallel highways, ten miles apart, are scrapping hard for coast-to-coast tourist travel this summer. A unique situation exists in northern central Ohio, where the Lincoln and Harding highways run side by side, east to west, across the state.

Ten years ago, the highway now known as Federal Route 30 was designated as the Lincoln highway. This route touched the cities of Mansfield, Galion, Marion, Lima and Delphos.

Several years later, the route from Mansfield to Delphos, through Bucyrus, Upper Sandusky, Dunkirk and Beaverdam, known as State Route 5, was improved, some grade crossings and curves eliminated, and the highway completed. The residents of these communities built up an organization and petitioned for the Lincoln highway, which after a bitter fight was transferred to Route 5.

When Federal Route 30 was established, it was routed over what was then the Lincoln Highway, and it has since remained the same, not following the Lincoln Highway route when it was changed.

Now the residents of the towns along the present Lincoln Highway want to get route 30 away from the Harding Highway residents. They claim that the Lincoln Highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, follows Route 30, except for the 100-mile stretch between Mansfield and Delphos, and that shifting Route 30 will make the whole route uniform.

To counter this appeal, the Harding highway residents are petitioning the governor and highway director to transfer the Lincoln highway back to Route 30 “where it belongs,” and in this way keep the two routes across the United States.

The latter group points to the fact that the red and white bands still appear on many of the telephone poles marking the Lincoln highway, and that it is followed by the majority of tourists anyway. They point to the fact that the population of the towns along the Harding highway is ten times greater than the population served by the other route. They stress the fact that the Harding Memorial is on the present route 30 and that this historical interest should keep Route 30 where it is. They are also claiming that improvements have been started on the Harding highway which will make it safer than the Lincoln highway route.

COUNTYS HAVE PERFECT MARK

COLUMBUS, O.—Lima and Allen county was the only heavily-populated section in the state without a first or second degree murder or manslaughter from July 1, 1929 to June 30, 1930.

That fact is revealed in statistics compiled in the office of Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown. Manslaughter charges resulting from death in automobile accidents were excluded from the statistics.

Though Lima and Allen county had not genuine murder case, it is credited with two Ohio's 17 black-mail cases in the same period.

Other counties without first or second degree murder cases or manslaughter charges were Ashland, Auglaize, Carroll, Delaware, Fayette, Van Wert, Fulton, Williams, Geauga, Greene, Hardin, Guernsey, and Champaign.

Total indictments for crime against the person remained almost the same as for the previous year.

Persons indicted for 1929-30 totaled 6,951 against 6,980 for the year before and convictions increased from 2,165 to 2,394.

STAGE SUMMONS POPULAR STARS

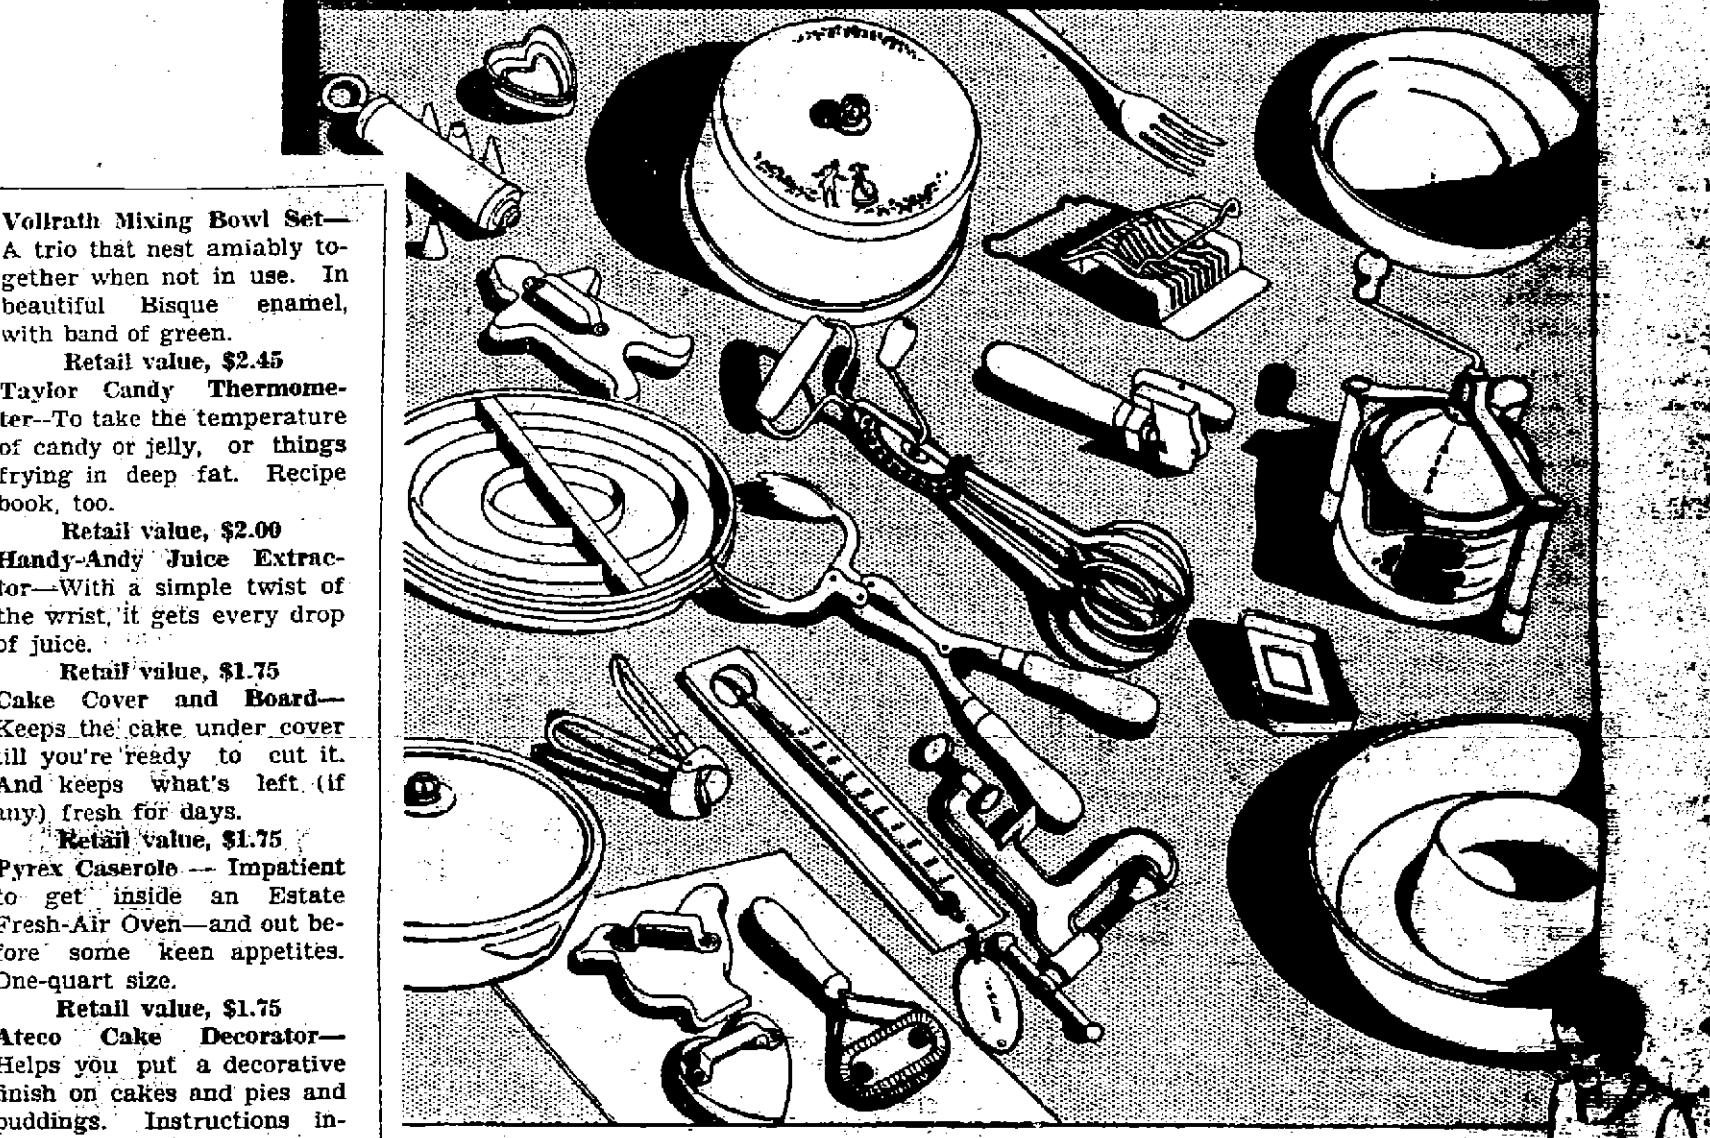

From “Big Time” vaudeville, station WLW brought to radio the boy and girl harmony team known as Salt and Peanuts only to find that the audience demands to find again as vaudeville entertainers.

The manager of the Cliftona has prevailed upon the Crosley Artists' Bureau to release Salt and Peanuts from broadcasting long enough to let them appear in person on the stage tonight so their many radio friends can see them in person.

Frank Salt, the man in the act, first gained his theatre reputation in the Salt and Pepper combination that became famous in musical comedies, on the vaudeville stage, and on hundreds of phonograph records. They played “The Passing Show of 1926”, “Gay Paree”, which had a 26 week-run on Broadway, “Merry World”, “Pamona of 1928”. All of these were Broadway shows; some of them went on tour. They played the Palace in New York City, the goal of every vaudevillean. They played the Low and Fox circuits, all the Balaban and Katz houses in Chicago twice, and finally played in New York City at the Theatre du Chatelet, the Martin, the Apollo, the Bijou, the Rue de la Paix, the Barony's.

New Oil Conservation Plan

FOR finding what now appears to be the best and easiest way out of the petroleum overproduction dilemma the Oil State Advisory Committee is to be commended. It seems to have found the one trail through a forest of difficulties.

Overproduction was running the so-called independent oil companies which draw a large part of their oil from small wells. Run for them meant unemployment and general depression in the states in which they operate. Two years ago the Colorado Springs conservation conference broke up without accomplishing anything Congress did nothing.

It had been suggested that the oil men curb production by a gentlemen's agreement, but that would have been in violation of the antitrust laws and there were politicians waiting for a chance to expose the violation. The government might have winked at the violation because of the emergency but such condonation would embarrass the government in the future.

The "way out" is state regulation of output based on interstate consultation and agreement. There is nothing to prevent the oil states from restricting production for conservation purposes, and restriction is the industry's chief need.

Nine states will cooperate in the plan with federal approval. They will be rendering the nation a service by conserving a natural resource and by ending wasteful methods which bring about unemployment and business depression.

Baffling Problem

THE problem of crime is the problem of adolescent youth. Eighty-five percent of criminals of the United States are young men and women between eighteen and twenty-five years of age. This is probably due to the fact that youth acts upon impulse—to it the present is everything, it has none of the fears and experiences of the past to warn it and has on perspective of the future. It is reckless of the consequences.

Criminal careers are progressive. Barely is a murder or even the robbery or burglary the first offense. Most criminal careers begin in early life. As a rule there is a progression from thoughtless rowdiness to petty thefts or embezzlement, then to robbery and burglary, and then often to murder.

The question is, why do those youngsters first break away and how can this evolution in crime be prevented? An answer to this question will largely solve the crime problem.

Environment and the wrong kind of home life start most of the way down the wrong path, but to remove these causes is a hopeless task. Society has been unable to prevent and probably never will prevent entirely. Not even the abolition of poverty, which is the most prolific breeder of crime, will eliminate all crime, as criminal instincts are frequently discovered among the children of the rich.

Speeding Up Air Mail

ONE of the transcontinental air mail lines will meet the challenge of the postoffice department for faster service by instituting 24-hour service between New York and Los Angeles this month. Express will be carried at the same speed and 24-hour passenger service will follow within a few weeks.

Here is progress of a practical nature. Business will benefit immeasurably. Commercial aviation and the air mail will gain prestige and patronage and a much needed transportation service will be made available.

Transportation and communication are not stagnant. Here is real progress and new competition which the railroads, express companies and telegraph companies must meet or avail themselves of. The old is becoming obsolete because it is too slow or uneconomical. The new is performing miracles in transportation and communication.

Those new high speed facilities will promote business between the East and West and will further lower the bars of distance which create sectional misunderstanding and conflict of interests.

A distressing incident of the air age will be crumpling one's fingers on chimneys.

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST"

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

"Bim" Martin, young newspaper reporter and her fiancé, Walter Vance, assistant police chief, are baffled by the murder of Baroness von Wiesse. The outstanding suspects are the butler, who denies receiving a note from the Baroness, her maid with whom she quarreled, and Mary Frost, whose shawl was wrapped around the body. Mary left the party with her husband, Ted, returning alone, later, for the shawl. According to the maid, Laura Allan had borrowed it. Laura claims she saw Mary enter the garden with the shawl. Bim feels that Mary is shielding Ted who flirted with the Baroness. A stone from a man's ring is found in the garden. Carl Carey, New York reporter, arrives at Kingcliffe. "Bim" is attracted to him. His implications regarding Laura Allan prompt "Bim" to investigate.

CHAPTER XX.

CAREY began to talk about other things then and Bim discovered that she was hanging on his words, thinking him charming. He was different from anyone she ever had known before; his quick mind stimulated while his debonaire sophistication fascinated her. Almost against her will she compared him with Walter, the straightforward unromantic young fellow she had known all her life. Rather in a daze she heard herself promise to accompany him to the second show at the Bijou Movie Palace, since, as she explained, she had something which would keep her busy until nearly nine o'clock.

When she left the Maple Leaf Tea Room Bim meant to visit Mary Frost but what Carey had said about Laura Allan kept turning in her mind. Laura indeed was a woman of mystery. And this was no time to be mysterious. Bim decided, suddenly, to find out something about Laura Allan. She walked slowly through Kingcliffe's tiny business section and on under the fine old overhanging trees out River Road. There lawns unrolled like huge squares of emerald velvet bordered by salvia and cannas and dahlias and the river was a shining mirror in the warm, drowsy sunlight of late afternoon.

But she saw none of these things as she moved along with her head down, eyes on the ground, turned in thought. She was trying to remember all she knew about Laura Allan and was surprised to find how little it was.

Walter had stated that the Pine Hill crowd did not like Laura, although they—or, at least Em Hardy—invited her to all their affairs and treated her as one of themselves. Bim wondered if this actually were the fact or if it merely happened that Laura's reserve kept them all at a distance. As Bim remembered, he had told Carey, did not care for the crowd; still, now that she thought it over, it seemed possible that what appeared to be dislike on Laura's part might be merely her natural aloofness of manner. Otherwise, why did she spend her time with them? Laura had no other friends and no intimates at all.

No Connection

Of course, Mary Frost did not like Laura and this was strange indeed, since Mary invariably liked everyone. How did Laura feel about Mary?

No one, probably, ever would know that—not that it mattered. After all, why did anything concerning Laura matter to the solution of the mystery surrounding the murder of the Baroness von Wiesse?

Bim stopped there in the street as she realized suddenly that neither Laura nor anything about her mattered in the least so far as she could see. But she remembered what Carey had said; his theory that much went on beneath the surface of the most circumspect lives. And with this she resumed her stroll. In order to be quite honest, however, Bim owed to herself a deep curiosity about Laura.

"Maybe I'm just being very feminine and a little catny," she told herself. "And again maybe I'm developing a nose for news."

Not Crazy

RETRIBUTION has been the penalty for crime ever since men have sought to deal with criminals as offenders against society rather than as subjects for private vengeance. There is now more need than ever to make the case of the usual transgressor a hard one, not to avenge wrongs against society but to deter others from committing like wrongs.

Correctional aims are but human. Glances over the stern fact that the man who raises his hand against his fellows cuts himself off from any friendly helpful attitude. It is a salutary lesson.

It is completely consistent with the theory of the punitive basis of justice to throw about victims of mental affliction the axes of science. Punishes for crime assume responsibility upon the part of the criminal. The mentally irresponsible are not accountable for their acts.

How it is that the acute criminal seeks for the escape of his client from the consequences of his acts. Neither judges nor juries under the general practice are competent to pass upon the intricate technical arguments of alienists particularly when these are found upon both sides of the case.

A good rule for judges and juries to follow is that crime is not evidence of deranged mentality, and that the circumstances in each case almost always make clear whether the crime was the act of a mad man.

But I have a feeling that Mr. Carl Carey will do some snooping, as he calls it, and I may as well know what there is to know first." She went on to Judge Allan's home, a rambling old house in the early English style, set far back from the street and half way down the hill descending to the river. But she did not turn in. It occurred to her that she would learn nothing from Laura herself and she had no wish to listen to Judge Allan's grouchy mutterings about everything in general, not to say anything in particular with Mrs. Allan, a woman whose only interest seemed to be the Kingcliffe Garden Club, of which she was president, and the crysanthemums she coaxed into flowering every fall.

A Direct Route

Bim fancied she knew a more direct route to information—a back-stairs route—which, at this moment, lay up the hill and through Willow Lane in the cottage of Mrs. Briggs, the Allan housekeeper, who was allowed to repair to her home for a couple of hours every afternoon.

With this in mind, Bim turned into Willow Lane, and presently seated herself in the neat little kitchen of Mrs. Briggs, who was busily engaged in the task of "putting up" apple butter.

Mrs. Briggs, a large, mournful-visaged woman, shook her head and declared that no good would come of the goings-on in the Allan household.

"She's that funny, Miss Laura is, and a girl that will have her way no matter what. I mind the time she was just a baby, and her pa that provoked with the way she'd stand a-looking and saying nothing till you'd want to turn her over your knee. I guess it was a sorry day that sent her back from school to spoil her sister's wedding—not that I hold with that snip of a Mr. Ted Frost, Miss Bimmy, dear."

"Did Laura spoil her sister's wedding?" Bim inquired, casually. Mrs. Briggs, she knew, would be stricken dumb by any show of interest. But now that good lady closed a melancholy eye and nodded.

"My guess is as good as another's," she declared. "I seen her and Mr. Ted Frost lallygagging around the house and garden, him as was as good as married to Miss Marjorie. And then what happens but a terrible row, with Miss Marjorie in hysterics, and the Judge stamping up and down till I thought he'd take a fit of apoplexy, and the next I know there'll be no wedding, and the girls are gone. It's my opinion," she added wisely, "that Miss Laura set out to make trouble for the excitement of it."

Bim was duly sympathetic with Marjorie and indignant with Laura. "I guess it's a good thing for Bimmy Baird that she doesn't intend to marry him, Mrs. Briggs."

"Then, if she doesn't," inquired Mrs. Briggs, "why does she keep encouraging the poor fellow?"

"Oh, but she doesn't! Why, nobody in this world ever has known Laura Allan to encourage Bimmy Baird!"

"Am I nobody, then?" demanded Mrs. Briggs truculently. "Excuse me, Miss Bimmy, dear, but you don't know the goings-on of Miss Laura, you and them friends of yours. Don't I hear her with them many a night, what with me sleeping right across the garden from her apartment, talking and talking till I get up and shut the window so's I can sleep, it's that late before she's letting him go home and to bed like an honest man."

With a little thrill of excitement tingling in her throat Bim nevertheless shrugged and asked in a bored tone what Mrs. Briggs meant by "Laura's apartment."

"She lives at home, doesn't she? I didn't know she had an apartment."

Mrs. Briggs sat down in order to do the matter full justice. "It's some of her nonsense, that's what it is. First she teases her pa for a studio in the village somewhere so's she can go to work, she says—her that's never done a lick in her life. Well, her pa says no but she keeps at him and finally he lets her have the little south wing that was shut up after Grandma

Allan passed away. Miss Laura moved herself in bag and baggage and there she stays when she's around home, never lettingting in or ma come near it. And the Judge might's well give in to a studio, I'm thinking, for she goes and comes as she pleases and nobody's the wiser."

"Well! And you've seen Bimmy Baird visiting her there, Mrs. Briggs?"

"Well, not exactly seen him, Miss Bimmy. But I hear 'em talking all hours. I sleep across the garden over the kitchen and voices carry—not that I'd ever listen, mind you."

"And Bimmy Baird," Mrs. Briggs divulged with a sly wink, "ain't such a hand to be put off as you'd think! Wasn't it only a few nights ago I heard him say something would surprise folks if they knew."

"Really! Oh, Mrs. Briggs, aren't you going to tell me what it was? If you knew how you astonish me!"

Highly satisfied in a doleful way, Mrs. Briggs allowed herself to be drawn into conversation with Mrs. Allan, she began, "Not quarreling loud—just some words and then neither of them would say anything. Thanks I, he's laying down the law and she's being naughty. And then he speaks up loud enough so's I couldn't help hearing. 'It's one thing or the other, my dear, and no more of this.' Says he, 'If I can't have you, no one else will.' 'Yes'm' he said, 'if I can't have you, no one else will. And then neither of them said any thing and after a while her light went out and I knew he was gone."

Mrs. Briggs sat back with the air of one who has done something very well indeed. "What do you make of that?"

"I'm sure I don't know. Only it doesn't sound much like Bimmy Baird, does it? A threat like that just isn't Bimmy's style at all."

"You can't tell about them young fellas," Mrs. Briggs stated, losing interest. "And now I'll have to be getting back for the Judge'll take my head off if his dinner is late."

Bim walked down the hill with Mrs. Briggs, saying little, thinking a lot. The more she heard about Laura Allan the more puzzled she became. Why should one as circumspect as Laura receive Bimmy Baird secretly—for it amounted to that—night after night? Why did Laura receive Mary Trent's shawl out into the garden at Eagle's Nest and deny it afterward?

Difficult Questions

What bearing did all of this have upon the murder of Countess von Wiesse?

There was no use asking herself these questions, because Bim could not answer them. And when she got back to Main Street, she saw by the village clocks it was too late for her to call on Mary Frost if she meant to keep her engagement with Carl Carey.

The evening for Bimmy about the evening for Bimmy. Merely stepping into the Bijou movie palace with Mr. Carey was like walking into some strange and delightful land since he made it an adventure for her in his casual, laughing way.

He had a curious sense of humor; one which seemed to ferment out the ridiculous side of everything but which remained good-natured nevertheless. Bim found herself amused as she never had been in her life before. Carey, she kept telling herself, was different from anyone she had known. But that alone, as she understood very well, was not his real attraction.

He had a trick of understanding, almost of reading her thoughts and this, while it sometimes proved disconcerting, was marvelous to her. Anyone else—Walter, for example—would seem very slow and rather stolid after Carl Carey. The possibility that she might fall in love with Carey, never crossed Bim's mind. He was wonderfully attractive; yet, if she thought about him from this angle at all, it was to reason vaguely that he would be here today and gone tomorrow, pursuing his brilliant, happy-go-lucky way where she could not follow. So she settled down to enjoy the moment and disregard what might come afterward.

CITIES SERVICE REPORTS INCOME

The year 1930 was the most outstanding one in the history of Cities Service Company, according to the Twenty-first Annual Report just mailed to stockholders. The year was marked by record earnings and unprecedented expansion in the organization's activities. The Company was fortunate in carrying out this program during a period of general depression when costs of development were lower than have obtained in many years. At the same time the expansion aided substantially in the national plan for unemployment relief.

Total assets of the organization on December 31, 1930, amounted to $1,282,624,854 as compared with $1,090,257,318 at the end of 1929, an increase of more than $192,000,000 in a single year. Consolidated net earnings of the Company and its subsidiaries were $84,862,968, an increase of $15,100,000 over 1929. Consolidated gross earnings were $213,036,007 as compared with $185,851,053 for the previous year. Consolidated current assets of the Company and its subsidiaries were $179,179,350, including $73,186,495 in cash.

Political News From Columbus

From paying tribute to the memory of a political figure esteemed alike by friends and opponents, observers turned this week to contemplation of the possible effects of the sudden death of Speaker Nick Longworth upon the national scene.

They counted again the partisan losses and noted this: the make-up of the 72nd congress to be convened next December consists on paper of 216 Republicans, 216 Democrats, 1 Farmer-Laborite, with three vacant seats to be filled. One of these vacancies, being in a Republican district, is counted upon to go to a C. O. P. candidate. Another, being in the south, is figured safely Democratic.

Thus allocated they would bring the balance to 217 Republicans and 216 Democrats. The third might result in an even balance between the two major parties leaving the vote of the lone Farmer-Laborite—Kvale or Minnesota—as the determining factor in the matter of organizing the house and choosing a new speaker. This third vacancy, in the late speaker's home district in Cincinnati, is considered to be in debatable territory since the Democrats came within 3500 votes of attaining the seat last fall.

For these reasons the eyes of the nation will be upon the First district of Ohio when an election is held to choose Longworth's successor. Upon no other congressional election in Ohio probably have such weighty consequences ever hung. The law empowers the governor to call a special election to fill the seat but, since it need not be occupied until December, it is likely that Governor George White will designate the date of the regular municipal election in Cincinnati next November as the day for the special election.

Speculation turned to candidates. Democrats and Republicans weighed carefully their most eligible prospects. One possibility considered: The able widow of Speaker Longworth who was Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the late potent Theodore Roosevelt. Speaking for her, Archie Roosevelt, her brother, gave assurance his sister had no political ambition, would not seek to succeed her husband.

Most frequently mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate is David Lorbach, state senator, capable lawyer, who has made a marked impression in the present assembly.

Students of Cincinnati politics pointed out: That any Republican candidate sponsored by the discredited Cincinnati "gang" controlled by Edward D. Schorr, state chairman, would start with a tremendous handicap; that even Longworth himself lost his district in one election to an outstanding Democrat, the late Stanley Bowdle; that the district would have gone Democratic last year with any candidate less popular than the Speaker at the G. O. P. choice; that the First district, like other sections of Ohio, probably is more inclined to Democracy today than it was last fall.

Congressional elections in Ohio in 1932 likewise will attract national attention by reason of the fact that two congressmen are to be chosen at large. The state's representation in the lower house is to be chosen from 22 to 24 on the basis of population recorded in the recent census. The present legislature killed all congressional redistricting bills proposing new districts to embrace the additional two members. So the entire state will register its choice of two men to fill the extra seats and to represent the state as a whole.

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

What is most certainly the cleverest display of brilliant acting that film audiences have been privileged to see in many months is on parade at the Cliftona Theatre, where "The Royal Family of Broadway" opened yesterday for a two day run.

"The Royal Family of Broadway" is based on the famous play, "The Royal Family" by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber. It depicts the home life of a leading family of American stage performers.

But it is not the impressive quality of the original playwriting alone which makes this play a wonderful movie. Most of the splendid attributes of this production are found in the stirring craftsmanship of Frédéric March, Ina Claire, Henrietta Crosman and Mary Brian—as presentable a quartet of sterling actors as one could wish for.

AT THE GRAND

The first appearance of Leatrice Joy as a blonde in pictures will be hailed with interest by her fans. She appears so in "The Love Trader," Tiffany's psychological drama coming to the Grand Theatre on Friday. Not only have fans looked forward to her screen appearances after a period during which she has been seen rarely, but they will be surprised at the transformation in her personality. H. B. Walthall, Roland Drew, Noah Beery, Chester Conklin, Barbara Bedford and William West, are other players, directed by Joseph Henabery.

NEWSPAPERS HELP HOME

SAN FRANCISCO. — INS—Modern newspapers, more than any other single factor are responsible for improvement in home furnishing, according to Edwyn A. Hunt, of the University of California extension division. "Household pages, women's pages and home furnishing advertisements in the modern newspaper have educated the public to modern modes in interior decoration," Hunt declares. "Furthermore, there has come about a sense of discrimination on the part of the buying public in the matter of period furniture."

HIS SHIP GOES OUT

NEW YORK.—The stories of dogs trotting back home from distant cities might have been matched by a seafaring yarn of a dog who swam back home to his ship, if only Paddy's swimming legs had held out. Paddy is a chow belonging to the captain of the City of Derby, and when his ship sailed without him he tried to swim after her. But the ocean proved too tough for Paddy and he came back with the tide. Police chopped through six inches of pier to rescue him when he became imprisoned at the wharf.

LIKE RETIREMENT SYSTEM IS OBJECT OF RAILROADS

WASHINGTON. —The "big four" railroad brotherhoods, with their army of workers in every state of the union, may start a drive at the next congress for enactment of a law, establishing a uniform retirement system on all interstate railroads. It was learned today.

A tentative proposal was introduced at the last session of congress by Senator Jones (R) of Washington, so that railroad men could gather data for submission to the next congress. Jones announced he would reintroduce the bill in December.

The proposition will attract wide interest, because it would initiate the first venture into a compulsory retirement on all old age pension law by federal mandate. With the federal government controlling railroad rates and governing interstate commerce, it was assumed the plan could be tried on the railroads before attempting to apply it to business and industry generally.

The bill would fix a compulsory retirement age of 70 years, to be later reduced to 60 years. A $230,000,000 retirement fund would be established from treasury funds to be administered by a federal board. Railroad employees would be compelled to contribute 2 per cent of their earnings to the fund, to be matched by an equal contribution from the railroads.

Upon retirements, the employees would receive life pensions, ranging from $50 to $150 a month, depending on their earnings, and length of service. Employees, after 25 years service, could retire with their pensions starting only at the minimum wage limit.

The measure contains numerous provisions to meet the discharge of employees, their voluntary change in employment and other changes in employment status. In each instance the employee could obtain advantage of the pension fund, if he continued making his contributions until he reached the pension age limit. In event of death, a portion of the pension would go to dependent members of the employee's family for a limited period. Jones conceded his bill was purely academic, and was introduced to develop public opinion on the subject. "It is a rather complex subject and a very important measure, because it contains some suggestions that the government may have to adopt at no distant date," he said.

Whatever its fate, it will mark the first serious consideration given by either branch of congress to the question of old-age pensions.

REPORT RICH

GEMS STOLEN

CLEVELAND, O.—Theft of jewelry valued at $23,000 from Herman Sagman, New York jewelry salesman, during a holdup in his room at Hotel Hollenden yesterday, was revealed by detectives today.

Report of the robbery was kept secret for several hours by detectives who launched a quiet investigation, it was said.

According to detectives, Sagman informed them he returned to his room at the hotel late in the afternoon after making several business calls in Cleveland during the day.

After he entered the room and locked the door, two men stepped from the bathroom, where they had been hiding, and covered him with guns, according to the detectives report.

One of the men bound and gagged the jewelry and they were ready to leave with the loot when a laundryman knocked at the door. The bandits untied Sagman and ordered him to get dressed.

dered him to go to the door and say nothing of the robbery. The robber pair then bound him a second time and escaped with the jewelry, which included several rings set in gold and platinum and a wallet containing loose diamonds.

Sagman finally managed to work himself loose of the sheets and towels that were tied about him and phoned for help.

Detectives said Sagman was employed with the A. Sanderov company, 71 Nassau Street, New York.

Did you ever stop to think EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Okla.

Newspaper editors and managing editors are men of vast patience and skill, and with faithful typewriters mold to their will masses of words so the public may read pleasantly. The wonder is that they do not lose heart in the game they must play incessantly with words.

During the "rush hours" when the presses are whirling angrily and all is pandemonium, their path is apt to become hard indeed, for time is precious and little can be given to the niceties of thought.

I dropped into a newspaper office today and passed the time of day with one of these busy editors, who took a few minutes to chat with me.

During our talk he said, "Have you heard the one about the irate butcher and the small boy who whistled outside his shop?"

It seemed that the butcher became thoroughly peeved and at last could stand the whistling no longer. Going outside he said to the youngster, "What are you making that noise for, you little scamp?"

"I have lost my dog," answered the boy.

"Well," shouted the butcher, "do you think I got him?"

"I don't know, Mr. Butcher," grinned the kid. "But every time I whistle the sausages in your window wriggle."

ANOTHER COURT SUIT LOOMING

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Another legal battle for custody of Adolphe Roome, Jr., the so-called giant boy, loomed today as his father sought custody of his son.

The boy's father, a surgeon, and his mother, a trained nurse, recently engaged in a court suit when the boy's father sought to curb his growth through medical treatment. The boy is 14 years old, weighs 235 pounds and is six feet tall. His mother, who is estranged from her husband, objected to the boy being subjected to these treatments.

and "The Shadow March" Ferreglio, both selections giving her an opportunity to display her temperamental warmth and histrionic ability.

Sharing honors of the evening was Mrs. Edith Cornell Hunter who accompanied Lucchese with exceptional brilliance, and who gave the Choral Club superb support.

The Woman's Choral Club under the direction of Mrs. Dolores Maxwell gave a concert last evening that far surpassed those of previous years. Much of the success of the program was due to the ability and genius of Mrs. Maxwell, who at every moment had the organization completely under the control of her baton.

"The first selection of the Club was Salutation (Choral Prologue) Poem and Music by Samuel R. Gaines. It was a happy choice as the opening number of the evening for it displayed to advantage the beautiful blending of voices.

"The second selection was perhaps the most pretentious of the Choral numbers. "The Sands of Dee," by Clay Harris. It was a difficult composition in which each rise and fall of tone, and each cadence was timed to the instant. Especially beautiful was the solo part sung by Mrs. Bess Stevenson whom it is always a pleasure to hear. Concluding the group was "Sing O Sing," James P. Dunn.

"As My Dear Mother" the exquisite arrangement of Dvorak-Stebbins and "Anitra's Dance" Grieg-Chaffin were the next selections. In all of these the timon attacks, splendid shading and clear cut releases made their rendition most pleasing. Solo work by Mrs. James Moffitt and Miss Colene Norvel added to the beauty of the first selection.

"The closing group of the Choral Club were "The Virgin's Slumber Song" by Ferrari-Gaines. Both compositions were especially well done and received an ovation of applause. Mrs. Maxwell and Mrs. Hunter were presented with bouquets of roses during the evening."

DON'S MARK STILL GOOD

Car Wood Falls Mile an Hour Back of Speed Record Set By Englishman.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 16.—Car Wood hurled his Miss America IX over the waters of Indian creek here today at a speed of 102.44 miles an hour, a mile an hour short of the world's speed-boat record held by Kaye Don, British racer.

Wood announced he would try again to break the record by 103.42 miles an hour after making minor adjustments of the powerful engines of the Miss America IX.

On his southbound run over the measured nautical mile, Wood attained a speed of 102.53 negotiating the mile in 40.43 seconds. This was faster than his run here several weeks ago, but .96 miles an hour slower than Kaye Don's mark.

He waited a few minutes and then sped northward at a speed of 102.33 miles an hour.

The big hydroplane was under perfect control, but Wood said it was necessary to use considerable rudder to counteract a cross wind of 8 miles an hour that was sweeping across the course.
